12.2 Exothermic and endothermic reactions (ESBQP) The heat of reaction (ESBQQ). The heat of the reaction is represented by the symbol  $\Delta H$ , where:  $\Delta H = E_{\text{prod}} - E_{\text{react}}$  In an exothermic reaction,  $\Delta H$  is less than zero because the energy of the reactants is greater than the energy of the products. Energy is released in the reaction.

Exercise: Endothermic and exothermic reactions. In each of the following reactions, say whether the reaction is endothermic or exothermic, and give a reason for your answer.  $H_2 + I_2 \rightarrow 2HI + 21kJ$  $CH_4 + 2O_2 \rightarrow CO_2 + 2H_2O + H = -802 kJ$ The following reaction takes place in a flask:  $Ba(OH)_2 \cdot 8H_2O + 2NH_4NO_3 \rightarrow Ba(NO_3)_2 + 2NH_3 + 10H_2O$ . Within a few minutes, the temperature of the flask drops by approximately 20C.

As we learn about exothermic and endothermic reactions we will see more on the concept of enthalpy. Exothermic and endothermic reactions (ESBQM). In some reactions, the energy that must be absorbed to break the bonds in the reactants, is less than the energy that is released when the new bonds of the products are formed. This means that in the overall reaction, energy is released as either ...

Key Facts. Endothermic and exothermic reactions are chemical reactions that absorb and release heat, respectively. A good example of an endothermic reaction is photosynthesis. Combustion is an example of an exothermic reaction. The categorization of a reaction as endo- or exothermic depends on the net heat transfer.

Exothermic Reactions. The exothermic reaction is the opposite of an endothermic reaction. It releases energy by light or heat to its surrounding. Few examples are neutralization, burning a substance, reactions of fuels, deposition of dry ice, respiration, solution of sulfuric acid into water and much more.
