Overheating of the inboard-outboard motor at the raw water intake ports on the lower unit can block off the cooling water to the engine. When the small intake ports on the lower unit become clogged with twigs, mud, seaweed or plastic, they can starve the engine for cooling water. Boat owners should inspect the intake ports and free the ports, or intake screens, of all debris. The trim setting ...

It is reliable and usually the annual maintenance performed during winter layup will prevent overheating problems. But when things do go wrong with the cooling system, the Mercruiser is easy to troubleshoot and repair. This article assumes that your boat has a raw water cooling system. That is, one that draws water from the lake, circulates it through the motor, and then discharges it back ...

The OMC factory engineering/service department has researched and said that the AVERAGE outboard will be used only about 15 hours a year according to one of their studies. However there is documented usage of a 1988 6 hp Johnson purchased new and being used a estimated total of 1200 -1700 hours of trolling time using 100:1 mix. He uses his 70 hp as a go to motor, then the 6 hp for trolling and ...

There were a couple of service bulletins concerning overheating with the early model 2005 engines. If your motor was affected, I would have hoped that the dealer checked over the motor according to the bulletin and the serial number range. Multiple overheated conditons can affect the piston life in a motor of any make or model.
