At the end of the novel--after Ender destroys the Buggers-- Mazer Rackham explains to Ender why this combination of innocence and experience is so lethal. Only a young child, ignorant of the traumas of a battle, could defeat the Buggers, because only a young child could muster the creativity and energy necessary to win such a battle.

In Teacher's Pest, Ender's father proposes that the population controls are designed to ensure that the Hegemony is never such a comfortable yoke that it will endure past the end of the Formic Wars. "I can tell them right now that population controls are about as stupid a move as they could make." "Depending on the goal," said John Paul.
